Balance of Power: What's at Stake

Iowa House – 100 seats, all on the ballot

GOP holds exactly a two-thirds supermajority (67). One net Democratic gain breaks it; Democrats need a net +18 for a 51-seat majority.

Locked in: 20 seats have only a Democrat filed and 9 only a Republican (SOS list, Aug 19, 2026).

Of the 71 contested seats, Republicans need 42 to hold the majority and 58 to keep two-thirds; Democrats need 31 for control.

Iowa Senate – 50 seats, 25 on the ballot

GOP is one seat short of two-thirds (34) after Democratic special-election wins in SD 35 (Jan 2025) and SD 1 (Aug 2025).

Not on the ballot: 19 R and 6 D holdover seats. Up in 2026: 14 R-held, 11 D-held (SD 11 vacant after Sen. Garrett's death).

Locked in: 4 D-only and 2 R-only seats → 21 R / 10 D effectively secured. Of 19 contested seats, Republicans need 5 for a majority and 13 for two-thirds; Democrats need 16.

Why two-thirds matters in 2027

Overriding a veto requires two-thirds of each chamber, and Iowa Senate confirmation of a governor's appointees requires a two-thirds vote (Iowa Code §2.32). With forecasters rating the open governor's race Lean/Tilt D, Senate seats such as SD 1, SD 21 and SD 35 could decide whether a new governor's nominees can be confirmed. Outside-rating context: Sabato's Crystal Ball rates both chambers Likely R (reaffirmed Oct 16, 2026).

Sources: Iowa Secretary of State 2026 General Election Candidate List (Aug 19, 2026); Wikipedia chamber compositions entering 2026; Iowa Code §2.32; Sabato's Crystal Ball. Seat math assumes all holdover and uncontested seats remain with their current/only party.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Reading the ratings: Democrats are favored or tied in five of six statewide/federal contests by at least one forecaster – the governor's race, U.S. Senate, CD 1, CD 2 and CD 3 – despite a 2024 Trump margin of 13 points statewide and a Republican active-registration edge of 9.8 points (Oct 1, 2026).

Polling: YouGov (Oct 6–12, 2026; 2,245 likely voters, ±3.1): Sand 50 – Lahn 44; Turek 47 – Hinson 46.

Last result: 2022 for governor, 2020 for this U.S. Senate seat, 2024 for U.S. House. Cash on hand: IECDB 10/14/2026 (governor); FEC 09/30/2026 (federal).

CD4: GOP led returns here at this point in 2022 (midterm) and 2024 (presidential).

- Ahead of the 2022 midterm pace. Returns are up 31% at the same point. The 2024 presidential year is an upper bound, not the yardstick.
- Democrats are banking early. Their share matches the 2022 midterm; the GOP share is down and NPA is up. Democrats lead all four districts, CD4 included.
- GOP ballots are out, not back. Expect the Republican share to rise toward Election Day. The early lead is not a forecast.
